FDA Bans Mint- And Fruit-Flavored Vaping Products But Exempts Menthol And Tobacco

Ken Alltucker

USA TODAY

The Food and Drug Administration said Thursday that it will ban fruit- and mint-flavored products used in e-cigarettes and vaping products while allowing vape shops to sell flavors from tank-based systems.

The FDA will begin enforcing the rule banning fruit and mint flavors within 30 days, and the regulatory agency will target companies that market to youths.

The flavoring ban does not apply to menthol and tobacco-flavored products. Vaping shops won a concession that will temporarily allow them to sell flavors in stores from tank-based systems, which allow people to mix their own nicotine and vaping juice.

U.S. Health and Human Services Secretary Alex Azar said the rule aims to "strike the right public health balance" by targeting products widely used by children while allowing vaping as a "potential off-ramp" for adults who want to quit smoking.

The long-anticipated action comes amid a sharp rise in teenagers vaping nicotine and THC and a vaping-related lung injury epidemic that has hospitalized 2,561 and led to 55 deaths.

"We will not stand idly by as this crisis among America's youth grows and evolves, and we will continue monitoring the situation and take further actions as necessary," Azar said.

Public health and anti-tobacco groups criticized the plan as not going far enough to stem an emerging public health threat.

The American Heart Association said in a statement that permitting menthol and flavors from open tank systems to remain on the market would "leave a wide pathway for continued e-cigarette use among our nation's children."

The limited ban is more nuanced than the Trump administration's plan last September that called for a wider ban of vaping products. At the time, officials cited preliminary data from the 2019 National Youth Tobacco Survey showing more than one-quarter of high school students used e-cigarettes in the past 30 days. Most of those underage vapers cited the use of fruit, menthol or mint flavors, the FDA said.

Reports last Thursday said that data last month from the National Institute on Drug Abuse's Monitoring the Future report showed a tiny percentage of high school students vaped menthol flavors. Kids who vaped nicotine overwhelmingly chose mint, mango and fruit flavors, he said.

"Our efforts have always been how do we balance?" Azar said. "How do we make sure products remain available for adults who are using them to get off or stay off combustible tobacco ... but also keep the most attractive products or flavors away from kids?"

Kids prefer using pods or cartridges to deliver flavored nicotine, not tank systems found at vape shops.

American Lung Association President and CEO Harold Wimmer said the limited ban does not go far enough to prevent youths from becoming hooked on nicotine.

"We know that children will obtain flavored products at vape shops," Wimmer said, citing a study last year that reported 45% of vape shops in California sold e-cigarettes to minors. "This new plan is riddled with loopholes and will leave children unprotected."

Gregory Conley, president of the American Vaping Association, described the limited ban as a "partial victory" that will allow thousands of small businesses to remain open. He warned the short-term exemption will require federal action this year.

A federal court order requires all vaping products to file an authorization application by May 12 to continue marketing products. Companies that do not meet the deadline are subject to FDA enforcement action under the court order.

"We are now 130 days away from the exact class of vaping products President Trump exempted from his ban – open tank systems – being banned because of the sky high costs associated with Obama-era rules the FDA is retroactively enforcing on vaping companies," Conley said. "President Trump will get the blame if America's vape shops are forced to close their doors in May."

Mitch Zeller, director of the FDA's Center for Tobacco Products, said the agency has advised vape shop owners about the May 12 deadline through guidance documents, webinars and other training.

"A vape shop that is in the business of manufacturing, by mixing nicotine and flavors, has a decision that it has to make about what business it wants to be," Zeller said. "If a vape shops wants to continue that mixing, this isn't a matter of policy. This is the law. That is a manufacturing practice and they are subject to that deadline."

FDA: Federal Tobacco 21 Law Is Now in Effect

Although the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has six months to finalize the federal Tobacco 21 law, the agency announced it is now illegal for retailers to sell any tobacco product to consumers under 21 years old.

On Dec. 20, President Trump signed legislation increasing the federal legal minimum age to buy tobacco products from 18 to 21. With the stroke of his pen, the FDA had 180 days to update its regulations — with the change taking hold 90 days later.

In total, the shift in the legal age was expected to go into effect in roughly nine months, as Convenience Store News previously reported.

However, the agency posted a message on its website announcing the new legal age is now in effect.

"On Dec. 20, 2019, the president signed legislation to amend the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, and raise the federal minimum age of sale of tobacco products from 18 to 21 years. It is now illegal for a retailer to sell any tobacco product — including cigarettes, cigars and e-cigarettes — to anyone under 21. FDA will provide additional details on this issue as they become available," the agency stated.

According to NACS, the law contemplates a regulation to provide retailers with clear direction on the new rules, including a requirement to verify the age of any purchaser under the age of 30. However, the law does not require a delay the shift to 21.

"While there are unanswered questions about when FDA plans to enforce this requirement and whether the agency can legally enforce it before updating its regulations, retailers should be aware that FDA views any sale to a person under 21 as a violation of the new law," the association said.

Cuomo Proposes Menthol, Flavored Vape Ban

Gov. Andrew Cuomo will propose a ban on the sale of flavored nicotine vaping products as part of his 2020 budget, he announced this morning.

Cuomo attempted to impose such a ban through executive action earlier this year but a state court blocked the move. His legislative proposal includes a ban on menthol flavors and limits on online sales of vaping products.

It would also empower the Department of Health to prohibit additive chemicals that have been linked to vaping-related illnesses and deaths nationwide.

"Vaping is a public health crisis, claiming too many lives and making countless others sick in a short period of time," Cuomo said in a statement. "While the federal administration continues its empty rhetoric on an issue impacting more than a quarter of all high school students, in New York we're using every tool at our disposal to keep help children safe and stop them from forming an unhealthy and potentially deadly lifelong addiction."

Cuomo also wants to ban all vaping ads targeted at young people and prohibit claims about their effectiveness for smoking cessation without FDA approval.

Earlier this year, a state health council voted to approve a ban that would have gone into effect on Oct. 4 but the state Appellate Division granted a temporary restraining order against the move.

Counties and municipalities across the state have considered enacting their own local bans in wake of the court action.

Cuomo To Call For Tobacco Sales Crackdown In 2020 State Of The State

Gov. Andrew Cuomo today announced that his 2020 legislative agenda will include proposals to crack down on retailers who illegally sell untaxed cigarettes or who sell tobacco products to individuals under age 21.

Cuomo, who highlighted the measures while previewing his State of the State address, said his administration “will not turn a blind eye to retailers who deliberately flout the law just to make an extra buck at the expense of the health of New Yorkers.”

“Trafficking untaxed cigarettes and selling tobacco to underage people isn't just unethical — it's also illegal. ... With this proposal, unscrupulous businesses will face steeper fines or closure instead of just a slap on the wrist,” he said in a statement.

Under the governor’s proposal, retailers found to have untaxed tobacco products would face new penalties, including possible closure or revocation of licenses for lottery, liquor, wine or beer sales. The Department of Taxation and Finance, which currently fines retailers selling untaxed cigarettes, would specifically be empowered to shut down such businesses by revoking their authority to collect retail sales and other taxes — a prerequisite to operating in New York, according to the governor’s office.

Cuomo will further use his Jan. 8 speech to call for raising penalties and fines for retailers that sell cigarettes or other tobacco products to individuals under age 21 — the new minimum purchasing age which took effect in November — from a minimum of $300 to $1,000. Repeat offenders, meanwhile, could lose their registration for a year.

Tobacco Products On Sale At Retail

The Massachusetts Public Health Council approved new rules restricting the sale of nicotine vapor, and flavored vapor and tobacco products.

The move comes a month after the state legislature approved legislation to ban the sale of flavored tobacco and vapor products — including menthol cigarettes — across the state. Gov. Charles Baker signed it into law on Nov. 27.

The new law, An Act Modernizing Tobacco Control, includes a number of restrictions on the sale of tobacco products, including limiting the sale of flavored nicotine vaping products to licensed smoking bars where they may only be smoked on-site.

Baker's signature also gave the Massachusetts Department of Public Health (DPH) new authority to regulate the sale of nicotine vaping products, to ensure the public is informed about the potential dangers of vaping and to implement other provisions of the law in order to protect the public health.

With the Dec. 11 action by the state health panel, the new regulations effective immediately are:

Retail stores licensed to sell tobacco products, such as convenience stores, gas stations, and other retail outlets, are restricted to the sale of non-flavored nicotine products with a nicotine content of 35 milligrams per milliliter or less.

The sale of non-flavored nicotine vaping products (with a nicotine content more than 35 milligrams per milliliter) is restricted to licensed, adult-only retail tobacco stores and smoking bars.

The sale and consumption of all flavored nicotine vaping products may only occur within licensed smoking bars.

Beginning June 1, 2020, the sale of flavored combustible cigarettes and other tobacco products, including menthol cigarettes and flavored chewing tobacco, will be restricted to licensed smoking bars where they may be sold only for on-site consumption.

A 75-percent excise tax on the wholesale price of nicotine vaping products, in addition to the state's 6.75 percent sales tax, will also go into effect on June 1.

"Massachusetts has taken important steps to protect its residents from the emerging public health risk posed by vaping products, and with the new law signed by Gov. Baker and the introduction of today's regulations, we continue to prioritize actions that protect the public health," said Public Health Commissioner Monica Bharel.

The new regulations also lay out a roadmap for the implementation of the new law, including enforcement authority, penalties for non-compliance, legal signage, and advertising requirements. A public hearing on the regulations will be scheduled within the next 90 days.

Cuomo: State Labor Department Eliminates Sub-Minimum Wage For 'Miscellaneous' Jobs

Governor Cuomo has announced that State Department of Labor is eliminating the sub-minimum wage for 'miscellaneous' industries statewide.

The order will affect around 70,000 New Yorkers and end the confusion and wage theft.

According to a release, workers that will be impacted by the new measure include: nail salon workers, hairdressers, aestheticians, car wash workers, valet parking attendants, door-persons, tow truck drivers, dog groomers and tour guides.

"In New York, we believe in a fair day's pay for a fair day's work," Governor Cuomo said. "But after an exhaustive investigation conducted by the Department of Labor, it's clear the tip system in many situations is needlessly complicated, allowing unscrupulous businesses to flout our nation-leading minimum wage laws and robbing workers of the paycheck they earned. That ends now. Today, I am directing the labor department to put an end to the tip credit in the industries with the highest risk of wage theft to help restore fairness for workers, many of whom are critical to the service industries that keep our economy moving forward."

This elimination will phased in over the next year.

Regulatory Relief Bill Signed into Law

This bill which was signed into law by the Governor amends the New York Executive law concerning regulatory finer for small businesses. This bill is intended to reduce regulatory fines on businesses and to create a productive relationship between the state and business owners that will allow them to work closely together.

The bill amends the Executive Law by adding a new section to provide a small business with the opportunity to cure for a first violation of such agency's regulations unless explicitly exempted.

Violation must be paperwork related, or omissions that are de minimus. Successful completion will prevent the imposition of penalties. However, no waiver may be given if the agency determines the violation resulted in a natural resource damage claim or serious actual harm, or may have Presented an imminent and substantial endangerment to public safety, human health or the environment; is a violation of human rights or civil rights law in loss of employee wages or benefits; interferes with any remedy, review, or resolution related to harassment or discrimination claims; was a willful violation; violates requirements related to federal funding; relates to state procurement; is similar to other violations; is a penal law violation; or relates to a substantive part of the business. Upon first violation a state agency shall provide the small business with a copy of any applicable small business regulation guide, or provide an in person meeting, teleconference or videoconference to help with the small business' compliance with the agency's rules and regulations.

Changes have been incorporated into the bill language to address the veto message concerns and to increase the appropriate period of time to allow for such ameliorative action to occur to ninety days.

According to supporters New York's small businesses are heavily regulated and are not always aware of the numerous current and new regulations. Various regulations can cost small businesses thousands of dollars in implementation and penalties. According to CNBC, New York state is currently ranked 29th when comparing top business states across the country (2016).

For small business to effectively abide by state regulations, they should be provided with essential resources such as literature or an in-person meeting that informs the owner(s) of their obligations to New York's state agencies. This includes frequent updates on updated rules or regulations.

By allowing our small businesses the opportunity to cure as opposed to an immediate fine, the state would be improving communication with our small businesses and working to improve our business climate.

The law became effective immediately.

Whether the law will have a real positive affect and benefit the small business industry will depend on enforcement. We suggest a NY violation received be evaluated against this law se determine if it provides any relief. Members are urged to send violations to the association office for an evaluation.

Legislation To Monitor 2020

An Assembly bill, A4782 from 2018/19 legislative session increases penalties for inspection stations including a mandate for suspension of the inspection license. It was not co-sponsored last year in the Senate but you saw the an article in the Times Union in September highlighting the bill. The memo in support references the unauthorized inspection of a limo by an inspection station as the impetus for the bill. It is however much broader in application.

The bill was generated due to a multi-death accident where twenty people we killed and the modification to the passenger size of the vehicle and a poor inspection and failure to repair the inspection failure all were causes of the accident.

The bill places much of the future blame for this type of accident on New York State inspection stations.

A 2019 law, Section 2 of this bill makes it mandatory for the DMV Commissioner to suspend a license to operate an official inspection station for any of the listed causes in the statute including failure to conduct inspections in conformance with rules and regulations or improper issuance of certificates of inspection. Under current law the Commissioner has discretion as to whether to suspend a certificate of inspection, it is not mandatory except in the case of a third or subsequent violation of rules and regulations committed within an eighteen month period. This provision was added by an article vii budget bill S. 1509B as chapter 59 of the laws of 2019. Inspection station must also send a mandatory form to the State with information on the vehicle that has been modified to increase it's passenger capacity by even one person.

If read correctly, Bill 4792 from 2019 provisions require a mandatory suspension for any violation of the rules and regulations is a significant because a potentially minor violation would result in a suspension. It is also inconsistent with the provision under current law requiring suspension after a third or subsequent violation.

We expect A4792 to return in the 2020/21 legislative session. We will need to monitor this bill's activities carefully.

If you have any questions, please call the association office.

Trump Signs Government Spending Bill That Includes Multiyear BTC Extension

President Donald Trump on Friday signed a massive spending bill that includes an extension of the $1/gal federal biomass-based diesel blender's tax credit (BTC) through 2022.

Under the bill, the BTC would be retroactively reinstated for 2018 and 2019 production and remain in place for 2000-2022.

Enactment of the extension marks a major victory for biomass-based diesel producers, who have been struggling with low margins amid demand losses caused in part by the large number of small refinery exemptions approved by EPA since 2017.

"Reinstatement of the biodiesel tax credit immediately incentivizes fuel retailers to once again begin buying and blending biofuels after years of market uncertainty," NATSO, which represents truck stop and travel plaza owners, said in a news release. "It is an enormous victory for not only the travel center industry, but also for the environment and America's truck drivers and consumers."

Federal Oil Spill Liability Coming Back Tomorrow

The federal Oil Spill Liability Tax is coming back after a one-year hiatus. The fee, which expired on Dec. 31, 2018 has been reauthorized, although it is not coming back on a retroactive basis. It will simply reappear as a charge beginning Jan. 1, 2020.

The fee may appear as a line item on some invoices, but other companies will simply build it into the rack price. Refiners are responsible for the fee which is 9cts per barrel of crude.

Since the fee only applies to crude, and crude-sourced hydrocarbons, it amounts to different charges on various products. For diesel fuel, it works out to 0.2143cts/gal; for a 5% biodiesel blend, it amounts to 0.2036cts/gal; and for B20, it runs 0.1714cts/gal. On a typical 10% ethanol blend of finished motor fuel, the fee will be 0.1929cts/gal, and for and E0 (all hydrocarbon gasoline), the charge is 0.1929cts/gal.

Court Recognizes Retailer Rights

On December 10, Judge Margo Brodie of the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of New York approved a new notice to merchants relating to the settlement in the long-running litigation against Visa, MasterCard and the largest card-issuing banks (In re Payment Card Interchange Fee and Merchant Discount Antitrust Litigation, MDL 1720). The notice addresses concerns raised that at least one oil brand had settled their merchants' claims in the case without being authorized to do so. There were also concerns that additional oil brands (and perhaps franchisors in other retail sectors) intended to do the same thing.

The notice provides merchants, whose claims were settled without their authorization, to inform the court and request to be included in the monetary settlement of the class action. The notice indicates that merchants whose claims were settled without their authorization can request and receive funds from the class settlement. Merchants who were originally excluded from the class settlement but now want to be included, however, must respond to the notice and let the settlement administrator know that they want to receive funds from the class settlement. A deadline for informing the administrator has not yet been set, but it will be part of the notice when merchants receive it.

The notice does not indicate what will happen if additional oil brands settled claims on behalf of their merchants without authorization. During the fairness hearing, counsel for the defendants indicated that they understood that entering into any such settlements would carry risk that they would have to pay the oil brand and separately pay the merchant if the oil brand did not have authority to settle that merchant's claim. It remains to be seen how any disputes about a brand's authority to settle on behalf of their outlets will be resolved.

The class settlement itself has not yet been approved, though that formal approval could happen soon. For now, NACS members should look for the new notice and respond promptly if their brand settled for them without authorization.

Report Outlines How Credit Card Networks Undermine Security, Block Competition

EMVCo, a global payments organization owned by the six largest card companies, has advanced standards that have diminished payment security in the United States and increased fraud risk, while helping its owners dominate the payments market, maintains a new white paper published by the Secure Payments Partnership (SPP). The report calls for payment standards to be drafted by organizations that meet the standards of open and fair membership and proceedings that apply to standard-setting in other areas of the economy.

Conducted by industry research firm Retail Payments Global Consulting Group (RPGCG), the report, "Payment Insecurity: How Visa and Mastercard Use Standard-Setting to Restrict Competition and Thwart Payment Innovation," explores how EMVCo's owners have driven up costs for businesses and consumers and left the United States with a fraud-prone payment card system, lagging behind other international markets.

EMVCo is run by Visa, Mastercard, American Express, Discover, JCB and China UnionPay. The organization produces technical specifications to ensure interoperability of payments, but the SPP report charges that those specifications become de facto standards with implications far beyond technical compatibility. Because EMVCo is run by the major card companies, it is not an appropriate organization to develop standards that have such high impact on the U.S. payments industry, the report states.

The Secure Payments Partnership (SPP), founded in 2018, represents and advocates for industries that span the payments system. NACS is a founding member, along with the Food Marketing Institute, National Retail Federation, National Grocers Association, First Data's STAR Network and SHAZAM.

René Pelegero, the report's author and RPGC president and managing director, said "It is our conclusion that the U.S. payments industry is being harmed by the card companies and EMVCo." Pelegero said, "EMVCo's ownership by the credit card companies has put profits ahead of security, driven up costs for businesses and consumers alike, and has left the United States with a fraud-prone payments card system even as fraud has been reduced in the rest of the world."

Said National Retail Federation Senior Vice President and General Counsel Stephanie Martz, "This study shows that the card industry has repeatedly ignored innovations that could have given us a more secure system, and that cannot be allowed to continue."

Dan Kramer, executive vice president, government and community affairs at SHAZAM, noted, "No single sector of the industry should be able to control the standards process to use it as a tool to shut down its competitors. The industry must work together to give consumers a more secure, transparent experience at card terminals."

GM Customers Rage as Automaker Struggles With Strike-Related Parts Delay

Written by Jamie L. LaReau, Detroit Free Press

Buick owner Ben Baby is on his third and last Buick. Baby, 41, has been waiting since Oct. 4. for General Motors (GM) to supply a Texas body shop with the parts needed to repair his 2018 Buick Enclave.

The delay, caused by the UAW's 40-day strike that started Sept. 16, has made Baby increasingly frustrated.

More than 20 parts are backordered, he said, and neither GM nor the body shop manager can estimate when Baby will be back in his car, he said.

"I'm done," said Baby, who lives in McKinney, Texas, about 30 miles north of Dallas. "All of this happened because of the GM strike. GM should have taken care of these things and been prepared, offered rental cars or something ... it is their responsibility."

A GM spokesman said preparing for a parts shortage is difficult, given that the automaker did not expect a strike. GM is sorry, the spokesman said, for the inconvenience that strike-related parts delays have caused some customers.

"We are doing our best to recover as quickly as possible," spokesman Jim Cain said in an email to the Free Press.

GM is running its parts plants in "emergency status" with maximum overtime, among other things, to return the parts operations to normal, said Cain. But it's a massive, complicated task to get caught up and fulfill back orders for specific parts.

EXHAUSTIVE WAITING

On Oct. 4, Baby was driving on the Sam Rayburn Tollway in Dallas when a driver three cars ahead of him suddenly stopped, triggering a four-car pileup. Baby was the last car in the chain reaction.

He was uninjured, but his Enclave had extensive damage to the front. His insurance company said it was repairable and refused to total the car, he said. The body shop manager told him it would be a long wait on repair parts because some 48,000 UAW workers at all of GM's U.S. plants had been on strike since Sept. 16.

For more than two months now, Baby and his wife have shared one vehicle. She drove it to her job, he worked from home.

Subaru Forester Passenger Airbag Sensor Lawsuit Filed

Written by David A. Wood, CarComplaints.com

Subaru Forester passenger airbag sensor lawsuit alleges the occupant detection systems have errors that cause the airbags to deactivate when adults are in the passenger seats. According to the plaintiff, 2015-2018 Subaru Foresters are affected by the problems, and her 2018 Forester is a good example.

The lawsuit alleges the plaintiff took the vehicle to a dealership which found problems with the detection system. Technicians allegedly didn't make any repairs but told the plaintiff not to place electronic items in the passenger seat.

The plaintiff says the airbags work part of the time and fail other times whether a passenger is in the seat or not. This is a danger that can cause an occupant their life, and Subaru allegedly knows there are problems but has failed to warn consumers.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) opened an investigation in August into passenger airbag sensor problems after receiving 51 complaints about 2016-2018 Subaru Foresters.

According to NHTSA, Subaru owners said the passenger airbag warning lights indicated the airbags were turned off when adults were in the seats. Customers reported the airbag sensors deactivated the airbags and also caused the seat belt alarms to continually give audible warnings.

Forester owners also reported paying as much as $1,000 to repair the passenger airbag systems, and many times the waits were long because replacement parts were backordered.

Subaru recalled more than 366,000 model year 2015-2018 Foresters in October after finding the passenger occupant detection system sensor mat harnesses could experience problems because of contact pressure between the terminals.

According to the automaker, the passenger airbags could deactivate and then reactivate without warning because of the terminal problems. Subaru also admitted what customers were reporting, namely that the airbag warning lights indicated the airbags were off when they should have been on.

In documents submitted to NHTSA, Subaru said turning off the ignition then turning it back on would reset the system and correct the faults. But the automaker also said this could be a temporary condition until the problem reoccurred while driving.

Convenience Channel Builds Up Electric Vehicle Charging Station Network

More electric vehicle (EV) charging stations will be popping up in the United States, thanks in part to the convenience stores industry.

Parker's unveiled six Tesla Superchargers at its convenience store in Metter, Ga. The first V3 Tesla charging site to open in Georgia, it is strategically situated for drivers traveling between Atlanta and Savannah along I-16.

The Tesla Superchargers complement two existing EV charging stations installed on-site by Georgia Power.

"Now, every electric vehicle on the market can be charged at our Metter store," said Parker's CEO Greg Parker. "We're thrilled that the new V3 Tesla charging site features the fastest chargers currently available in the United States. The new Tesla Superchargers offer a tremendous benefit for Parker's customers and for anyone traveling along the I-16 corridor in a Tesla vehicle."

These are the first Tesla Superchargers in the Parker's network, and the company has plans to add additional locations in the future. Savannah, Ga.-based Parker's operates 64 c-stores throughout coastal Georgia and South Carolina.

"We recognize the shifting fuel demands of our customers and always strive to meet those demands," said Parker's President Jeff Bush. "As a larger percentage of our customers begin driving electric vehicles, we want to provide them with a state-of-the-art charging infrastructure at strategic Parker's locations."

Ankeny, Iowa-based Casey's General Stores Inc. is also building up the number of EV charging stations at its c-stores.

The expansion comes as part of MidAmerican Energy Co.'s plans to build a fast-charger network throughout Iowa. According to MidAmerican Energy, it will begin constructing publicly accessible electric vehicle fast-charging stations in five Iowa cities by the end of this year, and 13 more next year, including nearly a dozen "ultra-fast" chargers.

Cumberland Farms' Suit Against Rhode Island's Truck Toll Program Moves Closer to Federal Court

The United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit upheld a lawsuit challenging Rhode Island's truck-only toll program, ruling the suit can proceed in federal court.

The lawsuit was brought by Westborough-based Cumberland Farms, the American Trucking Associations (ATA), M&M Transport Services Inc. and New England Motor Freight in the summer of 2018. In the suit filed in Providence, R.I., the plaintiffs argue that Rhode Island's new toll system violates the commerce clause of the U.S. Constitution by discriminating against out-of-state trucking companies.

The toll plan launched in June 2018.

However, in March 2019, a federal judge dismissed the lawsuit, ruling that the court lacks jurisdiction and the case should be brought in the state court system, as Convenience Store News previously reported.

On Dec. 5, the First Circuit ruled today that despite the Rhode Island's assertion, the lawsuit was not barred by the federal Tax Injunction Act, which generally prohibits federal courts from hearing challenges to state taxes, according to ATA.

"We have long believed that Rhode Island's RhodeWorks truck-only toll scheme was a violation of the Constitution and an attempt to use our industry as a piggy bank," said ATA President and CEO Chris Spear. "Today's decision by the First Circuit paves the way for us to make that argument in federal court and we look forward to the chance to vindicate our case on the merits."

The court, which is located in Boston, held that the RhodeWorks tolls are not a "tax," and was not immune from challenge in federal court," the Arlington, Va.-based association said.

"Today's ruling is just another step in getting these extortionary tolls torn down and we would urge the governor and her allies to do the right thing and put an end to this unfair and unconstitutional toll scheme so we can get serious about working together on how to equitably and effectively rebuild our infrastructure," said Rhode Island Trucking Association President Chris Maxwell. "With this ruling in hand, we are confident we will prevail in this suit once it is decided on the merits."

Connecticut lawmakers have been considering a similar truck-only toll; however, the recent appeals court's ruling could out a stop to the proposal, the Hartford Courant reported.

New Rules Limit Food Stamp Program

About 117,000 convenience stores are authorized to accept food stamps, based on a government estimate, and this important segment of their business faces new limitations.

The United States Department of Agriculture, which administers the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program, today announced a final rule that requires able-bodied adults without dependents (ABAWDs) ages 18-49 who have been receiving SNAP benefits for three months to work in order to stay on the program.

Specifically, these ABAWDs are limited to three months on food stamps within a 36-month period unless they are working or participating in a work program for at least 80 hours per month or volunteering. The law allows states to waive the limits in areas lacking employment opportunities

States can also exempt people who are unable to work from the limitation.

In 2018, the USDA said that there were 2.9 million ABAWDs on SNAP rolls, and nearly 74%, or 2.1 million, were not working.

U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Sonny Perdue said the rule is designed to move more able-bodied food stamp recipients towards self-sufficiency and into employment. The rule restores the system to what Congress intended: assistance through difficult times, not a way of life, the USDA said.

In 2000, the unemployment rate was 4% and the number of Americans receiving SNAP benefits was just over 17 million. However, in 2019, the unemployment rate is 3.6% and the number of Americans receiving SNAP is more than 36 million.

MVAC Training

Any person who repairs or services a motor vehicle air conditioning (MVAC) system for consideration (payment or bartering) must be properly trained and certified under section 609 of the Clean Air Act by an EPA-approved program. All technicians servicing MVAC-like appliances must be certified.

This means that in order to purchase refrigerant, you must be certified for EPA section 609. To get that training, go to nyassrs-training.com and follow the links.

This restriction does not apply to do-it yourselfers.

Selling Your Inspection License

If you are thinking of retiring or selling your business and have a New York State DMV Inspection license, your license may be valuable depending on the county where your shop is located. If you have questions on the sale and/or transfer of an inspection license call the association office at 518-452-4367.

Attention Inspection Stations

The Association has received a flurry of requests for legal representation for violations of the DMV commissioner regulations known as "clean scanning." that is when a vehicle other than the one to be inspected is substitute for the OBD-II part of the test. We have no defense for these violations. DMV has the ability to trace the OBD-II inspection to the vehicle used for the inspection.

If you cannot pass a vehicle for any reason, get help. That help could come from DMV. This violation almost always results in revocation.

September 2019

Dear Member/Supporter:

Each year the Service Station and Repair-Shop Association (SSRA) Trade Journal provides its members with a Trade Journal. We are currently gearing up for the 2020 year and are again requesting your support. Members are encouraged to use this publication as a means of doing business with co-members and those that support our industry and Association.

Enclosed is application for your ad in the Journal. It can be used by both members and for companies that want our members to consider them first when in need of special services, supplies and/or materials.

We are asking you, as a member and/or supporter, to place an ad and to solicit your suppliers to take one as well. It is helpful to include advertisements in the trade journal not only for service stations, but for banks, insurance companies, providers of supplies and materials, food and beverage vendors, and all those with whom you do business with on a daily basis. Please feel free to copy this application and pass it on to them. You are the only one who knows who you do business with and would recommend. Also, be sure to let them know that the 2020 Trade Journal is distributed to all association members and supporters and will include their contact information.

The Journal acts not only as a directory of telephone numbers and services, but tells everyone who we are and what we do. It provides a source of revenue to assist in our continued efforts to protect the industry and includes an extensive list of legislative issues in which the association is involved.

Remember, your dues and additional support given to the Association should never be considered an expense but rather an investment in your business and future!

If you have any questions please call (607) 398-7260. We look forward to your support.

Thank you.
