Why Domestic Oil Production Isn't Producing Lower Gas Prices

A piece in Fortune earlier this week highlights the curious case for rising U.S. gas prices: While the U.S. “is enjoying an energy boom,” producing more crude oil than at least one OPEC country, the price of gas is $4 or more per gallon, even as demand hits historic lows.

“[M]ore drilling is happening now, and prices are still going up,” writes Leah McGrath Goodman. The reason? “Wall Street has changed the formula for pricing gasoline.”

Until last year, gas prices were directly linked to the price of U.S. crude oil, which was set daily in Cushing, Oklahoma, the largest oil-storage hub in the United States. However, today, U.S. gas prices are tracked to the price of Brent crude, a type of oil found in the North Sea. And Brent crude trades at roughly $20 more per barrel than U.S. oil.

Therefore, even while more drilling is taking place on U.S. soil, the price benchmark has resisted a decrease, as it is linked to more expensive oil. “This is an unprecedented shift,” writes McGrath Goodman. “Since the dawn of the modern-day oil markets in downtown Manhattan in the 1980s, U.S. gasoline prices have followed the domestic oil price...In the past year, U.S. oil prices have repeatedly traded in the double-digits below the Brent price. That is money Wall Street cannot afford to walk away from.”

Wall Street traders and major oil companies, therefore, seek the highest price for oil, and “just because an oil company drills inside U.S. borders doesn't mean it has to sell to a U.S. buyer,” McGrath Goodman notes. Overseas buyers, she said, offer greater profit, which is winning over patriotism.

“This is why Americans should carefully consider the sacrifice of wildlife preservation areas before designating them for oil drilling,” she adds. “The harsh reality is that we may never see a drop of oil that comes from some of our most precious lands.”

As more North American pipelines emerge, this will lead to greater exports, which may lower global prices in the long term, though lead to “more of our North American petroleum products...lost to competition from abroad” in the short term.

“America will have to fight to keep oil on its shores instead of seeing it shipped to another country — by paying dearly for that privilege,” McGrath Goodman concludes.

Inspector General Report on EPA Controls for Underground Storage Tank Inspection Programs

Key Finding: A report from EPA's Office of Inspector General finds states have “generally effective” programs to verify the quality of underground storage tank inspections, but recommends updating those programs to reflect policy changes in the 2005 Energy Policy Act.

The Environmental Protection Agency's Office of Inspector General says EPA regions are “generally effective” at verifying the quality of state underground storage tank (UST) inspection programs, but recommends the agency update its agreements with states to reflect policy changes in a 2005 energy law.

EPA regions effectively verified the quality of state inspections by reviewing reports, conducting joint and follow-up inspections, analyzing reports for anomalies, auditing contract inspections, and offering annual training and certification, according to the report, Controls Over State Underground Storage Tank Inspection Programs in EPA Regions Generally Effective.

The report was released Feb. 16.

States may oversee their own UST inspection and compliance programs, provided the requirements are as stringent as federal standards. Each state with its own program must submit a memorandum of agreement with EPA outlining the roles and responsibilities of both state and federal regulators.

The 2005 Energy Policy Act required inspections of storage tanks every three years, expanded requirements for operator training, enhanced the authority of states to prohibit deliveries to storage tanks, and mandated the installation of secondary containment systems for tanks within 1,000 feet of community water systems.

There are nearly 600,000 underground storage tanks throughout the United States, defined as a tank with at least 10 percent of its contents underground. EPA provided $34.5 million in grants for states, tribes, and territories to implement programs in 2010. Thirty-seven states, the District of Columbia, and Puerto Rico administer inspection and compliance programs.

EPA agreed with the report's recommendation to update memoranda of understanding with the states but did not set a time frame for compliance, prompting the inspector general to call the recommendation “unresolved.”

Memoranda Out of Date

The report examined the programs of 16 states in EPA regions 5,7, and 8. Five of the states did not have memoranda of agreement, and for 11 others the agreements were out of date. Though the report acknowledges memoranda are not required in states without their own storage tank programs, it called them "a mechanism to determine implementing agency authority."

The inspector general's office said it conducted research from July to November 2011 through interviews with staff and managers in three EPA regions and analysis of memoranda of agreement between states and EPA.

PMAA To Ask EPA To Withdraw Proposed Tank Rule

The Petroleum Marketers Association of America (PMAA) intends to tell the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) that its proposal to amend the federal underground storage tank regulations is "seriously flawed," and it will ask the agency to withdraw proposed rule, the Oil Express has learned.

PMAA said in comments to be filed with EPA Friday that the revised underground storage tank (UST) rule would cost more than six times EPA's estimate, says a document obtained by OE. PMAA has calculated the annual compliance cost at $6,100 per marketer, while EPA's estimate is just $900.

"These costs increase significantly when the expense associated with the storage, handling and disposal of potentially contaminated water used to conduct mandatory integrity testing for spill buckets is added," wrote lawyer Mark Morgan, in PMAA's comments. "Depending on the number of spill buckets at a UST site, this one requirement alone could add $4,000 per year to the $6,200 in annualized compliance costs."

Morgan said PMAA is unconvinced EPA made the effort to reach out to stakeholders as it claims to have done in the preamble for the proposed rule. EPA just asked tank owners and operators to "whittle down a list of 250 potential UST regulatory changes to just 25," said Morgan. As a result, marketers had little inkling a costly regulatory overhaul was coming.

Because of the "significant" economic impact on small businesses, EPA is required under the Regulatory Flexibility Act (RFA) to conduct an Initial Regulatory Flexibility Analysis (IRFA) and form a small business advocacy require panel before publishing a proposed rule, Morgan points out.

Because of "procedural failures," PMAA recommends withdrawing the proposal until EPA obtains the industry input required by law.

No need to post that NLRB poster by April 30th.

As most of you are already aware, the NLRB issued a rule requiring employers covered by the National Labor Relations Act (the Act) to post a notice advising employees of their rights under the Act; irrespective whether the employer was union or non-union. The notice posting rule was scheduled to go into effect on April 30, 2012.

The National Association of Manufacturers and the South Carolina Chamber of Commerce filed suit claiming the rule exceeded the NLRB's authority. In March 2012, a federal district judge in D.C. ruled that the NLRB had the authority to require employers to post a notice advising employees of their organizational rights. The National Association of Manufacturers then sought to enjoin the implementation of the rule pending its appeal of the district court judge's decision. The judge rejected the request. However, last Friday, a federal district judge in South Carolina concluded that the NLRB exceeded its authority in requiring employers to post the notice. This created a split in the federal courts. Then this morning, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. stepped in and enjoined enforcement of the notice pending the D.C. Circuit's resolution of the matter on the merits. That means employers do not need to post the notice at this time. Chances are that the court will not reach a decision on this matter before December 2012. Therefore, employers have at least a temporary reprieve before the notice must be posted.

ITC Votes Down Duties on Steel Wheels from China

The International Trade Commission (ITC) voted 6-0 on April 17 not to impose dumping or countervailing duties on certain steel wheels from China. The vote means that the ITC found that the dumped and subsidized imports from China are not materially injuring or threatening material injury to the U.S. industry.

The petitions were filed by Accuride Corporation and Hayes Lemmerz International Inc. for investigations encompassing steel wheels from China with a diameter of 18-24.5 inches. The scope includes steel wheels, discs and rims of carbon and/or alloy composition and clad wheels, discs, and rims when carbon or alloy steel represents more than fifty percent of the product by weight. It also included wheels, rims and discs, whether coated or uncoated, regardless of the type of coating. The imports of steel wheels were valued at an estimated $84.2 million in 2011.

AAIA and other Industry Groups Call on EEOC to Obtain Public Comment Prior to Issuing Criminal Background Checks Guidance

Multiple industries and trade associations including AAIA forwarded a letter to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) on April 18, raising questions as to whether the commission may be exceeding its statutory authority relative to possible changes to guidance on criminal background checks that have in been in place for twenty-five years. The same groups have been seeking a more transparent guidance at the EEOC since a July 26, 2011 public meeting exposed a lack of any real-world input from employers, volunteer organizations, background screening companies, as well as victims' rights organizations, law enforcement and criminologists, all of which have been responsible users of criminal background checks.

After little or no EEOC response to a letter dated Feb. 1, 2012, from the same extensive group of businesses, concerns grew that the EEOC, while not subject to the formal notice and comment requirements of the Administrative Procedure Act, will be introducing new guidance that will have significant impact on the ability of employers to perform employee background checks. Multiple concerns had already been raised about the possible lack of EEOC distinction between background credit checks and credit scores, which are also up for guidance consideration.

Another serious concern is the possibility the employers may be required to perform validation studies, at a typical cost of $80,000-$100,000 or more, to defend against a charge of "disparate impact." According to EEOC guidance this means that, even where an employer is not motivated by discriminatory intent, Title VII prohibits an employer from using a facially neutral employment practice that has an unjustified adverse impact on members of a protected class. Few employers are able to afford this costly process and would simply be unable to perform criminal background checks, which could easily be construed as threat to public safety.

Highway Reauthorization

Republican leadership staff are showing fatigue and proposing that the House put the five-year House bill (HR 7) on the shelf and pursue a 90-day extension plus approval of the Keystone XL pipeline. If such a bill passed, the House and Senate could convene a conference committee to negotiate between the Senate bill (S. 1813 aka "MAP-21") and the House extension.

Members of Congress have not yet returned from their Easter recess, so this strategy has not yet been vetted with elected officials. We do not want the House to abandon HR 7 without a debate and vote. We continue to speak with leadership and transportation committee staff, as well as rank-and-file Members' staff.

Small Business Tax Cut

This week, the House will consider the Small Business Tax Cut Act, H.R. 9. The Small Business Tax Cut Act is a simple, clear solution to help small businessmen and women grow their businesses and hire new workers. The Small Business Tax Cut Act will allow small businesses with fewer than 500 employees to take a tax deduction equal to 20% of their active business income, irrespective of how the small business is organized. Our 20% small business tax cut goes straight to the bottom line so small business owners can retain more capital, invest in their businesses and create more jobs.

MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION

BILL NUMBER: A9683 – S7082

SPONSOR: Simanowitz – Gallivan

The subject bill amends the New York State Vehicle and Traffic Law and claims to create the proper tire repair act. What it does is increase the price of repair a flat by three times what its cost is now.

This proposal adds a new article, 12-D, to the vehicle and traffic law that the sponsor says describes the proper method when repair a flat tire. If this bill were to become law it would be cheaper to purchase a new tire than have the flat repaired.

This legislation will create standards that must be followed for a motor vehicle repair shop to perform a tire repair. The allegation is that improper tire repairs will create a safety problem for motorists. The bill memo does not give any examples where a repaired tire caused an accident.

The repairs and how a repair should be made must be left to the professionals who repair tires every day. They will know when a repair outside the repairable area warrants a new or different type of repair. The time when the tire should be removed from the rim/wheel assembly to repair damage to the tire inner liner. The technicians who perform these repairs know when and how a repair demands the tire are removed from the rim.

When tire is removed from the rim the price of repair escalates. A $10.00 repair becomes a $25.00 repair. The tire will need to be balanced and wheels with sensors attached to the rim will need to be replaced and the computer recalibrated.

Legislating how to repair a flat tire is like telling a brain surgeon where to drill.

For the above reasons the New York State Association of Service Stations and Repair Shops, Inc. oppose the bill and urge it be defeated.

Minimum Wage

Bill Number A9148-S6413

Assemblymen Wright Senator Klein

The subject bill amends the New York State Labor Law concerning the State minimum wage law. It would raise the statutory minimum wage from $7.25 to $8.50 per hour on and after January 1, 2013 and provides that on the 1st of January of each New Year the rate will be indexed to inflation.

The bill also provides that effective January 1, 2013 the statutory minimum wage will be $8.50 per hour, and for food service workers receiving a minimum cash wage, including those for which employers are authorized to make wage deductions for meals and lodging, $5.86 per hour. The commissioner of the Department of Labor will increase the minimum wage depending on the cost of living indexes beginning on January 1, 2014 and the minimum wage to inflation.

The sponsor of the bill claims that in 2010, there were over 264,000 people in NYS earning at or below the minimum wage, many of which reside within the New York City metropolitan area, the area ranked as having the highest cost of living in the nation. What he neglects to mention is that small businesses are as bad off at their employees. Every new expense forces a business owner to reevaluate his/her business profitability. After payroll the number one expense for a small business is compliance with federal and state regulations. Every dollar added to the payroll of as an expense force a business to consider closing.

This bill raising the minimum is ill advised at this time. It will be counter-productive. Some business will close while other will be forced to continue with fewer employees.

For the above reasons the New York State Association of Service Stations and Repair Shops, Inc., if affiliates and member oppose this bill and urge it be defeated.

Gasoline Once Daily Pricing

Memorandum In Opposition

Bill Number: A1970 – S603

Sponsor: Assemblymen Jeffries (Ms) Senator Peralta

The subject bill amends the New York State General Business Law, in relation to prohibiting more than one increase in the price of gasoline in any twenty-four hour period. The purpose of this bill is to prohibit gasoline prices from being adjusted at the pump multiple times daily on the same lot of gasoline, which was purchased wholesale at a fixed price.

This legislation it will make it unlawful for anyone engaged in the sale of motor fuel, or anyone who produces and stores or exchanges motor fuel at a terminal or facility and who sells or transfers motor fuel through the loading rack at such terminal facility, or an affiliate of such, to increase the price of any grade or quality of motor fuel sold at a retail outlet more than once in a twenty-four hour period. Any violation may result in a civil fine of not more than five hundred dollars to be collected by the corporation counsel for any city or by the appropriate attorney of any political subdivision as shall be designated by the governing body of such political subdivision.

The legislature feels that as gas prices soar, price gouging follows. Typically the motor fuel industry is lumped to together and suppliers and retailer are the focus of enforcement. Unfortunately the State does not have the muscle to go after suppliers and settles on going after the people least able to defend themselves, the retailers.

For the above reason the New York State Association of Service Stations and Repair Shops, Inc., if affiliates and members oppose this bill and ask it be defeated.

MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION

BILL NUMBER: S7087

SPONSOR: Senator Zeldin

The subject bill amends the New York State General Business Law and the Agriculture and Markets law. It changes provision that dictate motor fuel pricing signs on service stations. The bill would require any service station motor fuel to the public advertise the higher price when the same grade of motor fuel is sold at different prices from a single place of business if the price deviation exceeds seven percent for the same grade of motor fuel. The change to the existing law is a reaction to an isolated situation by one dealer protesting the high cost of credit and service fees by credit card companies.

Section One amends the general business law by defining advertising medium, requiring that a street side advertising medium be displayed at any place of business offering for sale or selling any motor fuel to the public if the place of business sells the same grade of motor fuel for different prices and the price deviation exceeds seven percent. This section also establishes minimum readability requirements for the letters and numerals required pursuant to this section.

A first violation of this section would be punishable by a $500 fine. Any subsequent violations would result in a one thousand dollar fine. A third violation would additionally result in a shutdown of the establishment for ten days, or until the establishment comes into compliance with this provision, whichever is longer. Finally, a variance is provided for in relation to the required advertising mediums for businesses in political subdivisions that have laws or ordinances that are contrary to this provision or for scenic or historic purposes.

This section is flawed. Not all services station has or allowed to have street signs. If they do have a street sign it may and not address the provisions in this bill.

Section Two amends the Agriculture and Markets law to require that signs or labels that are currently required at the dispensing pump, also indicate the difference in the amount per gallon for cash and credit customers.

This section is not clear. The pump to signs already provides the difference prices between cash and credit. Does the sponsor what the station to do the math?

The sponsor claims that some places of business that are offering for sale or selling motor fuel have been luring customers to their stations by deceptively advertising a reduced price for motor fuel that is actually only available to those customers who are able to pay with cash for their transaction.

The sign posting law dealing with motor fuel prices has been in effect for a long time and has worked will. When prices rise on motor fuel the public feel entitlement has been removed for their lives and complain to the legislature and the attorney general. Neither of these official offices have the ability or the inclination to really address the issue so they turn their attention to the lower and weakest point in the chain, the retailer.

This bill is nothing more that attempting to kill a mosquito with a sledgehammer.

If the legislators really want to resolve the credit prices and the higher prices for motor fuel they should call in the retail industry for discussion.

For the above reasons the New York State Association of Service Stations and Repair Shops, Inc., it affiliates and members oppose this bill and urge it be defeated.
