New York Considers Taking Tobacco 21 Statewide

The number of states prohibiting the sale of tobacco products to anyone under 21 years old could grow by two this year.

New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo included a proposal to raise the legal minimum age to buy tobacco products, including vapor products, to 21 in his 2019 executive budget.

The legal age in New York now stands at 18.

Cuomo's proposed tobacco legislation also includes a ban on tobacco sales in pharmacies and clarifies the state health department's authority to ban the sale of certain flavored e-cigarette liquids, among other measures.

In all, the proposed legislation includes:

- Raising the minimum legal age to buy tobacco products to 21;
- Ending the sale of tobacco and e-cigarette products in pharmacies;
- Prohibiting the display of tobacco products and packaging, including e-cigarettes, in all retail stores that are not adult-only;
- Clarifying the state health department's authority to ban the sale of certain flavored e-liquids;
- Restricting available discounts provided by tobacco and e-cigarette manufacturers and retailers; and
- Requiring e-cigarettes be sold only through licensed retailers.

"We have made great strides to stamp out teen smoking, but new products threaten to undo this progress to the detriment of millions of Americans. In New York, we refuse to stand idly by while unscrupulous businesses target our young people and put their very futures at risk," Cuomo said. "With this comprehensive proposal, we are taking aggressive action to combat this very real public health crisis and curb the use of nicotine products before they result in deadly consequences for an entire generation of New Yorkers."

A group of lawmakers in Virginia is also looking to pass statewide Tobacco 21 legislation, according to The Washington Post.

"Certainly we have a history of tobacco . . . that really dates back to 1608," said Del. Christopher P. Stolle (R-Virginia Beach), a physician who is sponsoring the bill in the House. "We adapt as we move forward, and we recognize it's something that needs to be done. We certainly are a product of our history, but I don't think we're bound by our history."

The bill is also supported by House Speaker Kirk Cox (R-Colonial Heights), Senate Majority Leader Thomas K. Norment (R-James City) and Senate Minority Leader Richard L. Saslaw (D-Fairfax).

Gov. Ralph Northam has not commented on the proposal.

To date, six states and Washington, D.C. have Tobacco 21 laws on the books. Massachusetts became the latest state hike the minimum age to buy tobacco products to 21 on Dec. 31.

Government Shutdown Closes E-Verify Website

The partial government shutdown, heading into its third week, has shuttered the federal E-Verify website, Nation's Restaurant News reports. As of press time, there had been no movement on the funding impasse between President Donald Trump and Congress.

The federal E-Verify electronic verification employment system website had been shut down. The system, which verifies the info on a worker's Form I-9 with Social Security Administration records, is run by the U.S. Department of Homeland Security, which had been partially hobbled by the lack of a funding bill.

If retailers were "using E-Verify before the shutdown, they can go back to the existing rules for hiring documents that the majority of employers in the U.S. still use," said David T. Denney of the Dallas-based Denney Law Group.

Employees still should fill out the Form I-9/Employment Eligibility Verification, which has a list of which documents can be submitted to determine employment eligibility. Workers can give a combination of eligibility and identity documents too. "Remember, I-9 documents must be kept separate and apart from employee files and must be retained for three years after the later of three years from hire or one year from the end of employment," Denney pointed out.

Homeland Security indicated the three-day rule for creating E-Verify cases has been suspended during the shutdown, but retailers should know the time limits in place to file documents once E-Verify service starts again.

Government Shutdown Blocks Access to Loans for Small Businesses

As the federal government shutdown continues, thousands of small businesses have had their new loans held up, the Washington Post reports. The Small Business Administration hasn't processed new loans since December 22, meaning owners can't have access to the funds needed to launch or expand their business.

One such owner is Brooks Troxler, who runs Trox Tech in Charlotte, N.C. He'd planned to buy new property to expand his business, but the purchase is incomplete because of the shutdown. "I'm praying this shutdown ends quickly," said Troxler, who has seven employees. "We were 99% done. We were at the finish line, and now it's like they pulled me back."

While the president and Congress continue to be at a standstill over the funding bill, businesses in areas with high numbers of federal workers and contractors are beginning to feel the pinch. And scores of other businesses are not receiving loans or payments owed by other firms.

"If it lasts longer than a month or so, we could see larger knock-on effects to private sector activity," said Michael Feroli, chief U.S. economist for JPMorgan. "In the past, there has been a noticeable effect on measures of consumer and business sentiment."

Retailers also can't use the federal E-Verify electronic verification employment system because its website had been shut down. The government also announced that February SNAP benefits would be released early.

February SNAP Benefits Will Be Issued Early Amidst Shutdown

Yesterday, the Secretary of Agriculture Sonny Perdue announced the agency's plan to ensure that participants in the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) receive their benefits in February if the shutdown persists. Funding for the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), which oversees SNAP, expired when Congress failed to pass a measure to fully fund the government on by December 21, 2018. At that time, SNAP benefits for the month of January were fully funded, but an open question remained as to whether the agency would be able to fund benefits in February.

"To protect SNAP participants' access for February, USDA is working with states to issue February benefits earlier than usual. USDA will rely on a provision of the just-expired Continuing Resolution (CR), which provides an appropriation for programs like SNAP and Child Nutrition to incur obligations for program operations within 30 days of the CR's expiration. USDA will be reaching out to states to instruct them to request early issuance of SNAP benefits for February. States will have until January 20th to request and implement the early issuance. Once the early issuances are made, the February benefits will be made available to SNAP participants at that time," stated USDA.

"At President Trump's direction, we have been working with the Administration on this solution. It works and is legally sound. And we want to assure states, and SNAP recipients, that the benefits for February will be provided," Perdue said. "Our motto here at USDA has been to 'Do Right and Feed Everyone.' With this solution, we've got the 'Feed Everyone' part handled. And I believe that the plan we've constructed takes care of the 'Do Right' part as well." USDA's early issuance strategy relies on each state to request USDA approval to issue February benefits on or before January 20, 2019. With the early issuance of benefits to SNAP participants, USDA is encouraging SNAP retailers to prepare for early transactions and to staff and stock stores appropriately.

Appeals Court Rules "Joint Employment" Test as Too Broad

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the DC Circuit ruled that a 2015 National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) decision failed to properly define "indirect control" as related to working conditions as part of the agency's so-called "joint employment test, Reuters reports. The 2-1 decision is being hailed a victory for business groups. The Obama-era test was to determine whether the relationship between a business and the employees of its contractor or franchisee qualifies as joint employment.

The 2015 standard provided a test to determine the relationship between a business and contractor or franchisee employees constituted joint employment. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce has been fighting the Obama administration's rule, saying it could wreak havoc with the franchise business model and supply chains.

In September, the NLRB proposed a mandate that would return the rule to the pre-2015 standard definition of joint employer. The board has indicated a final rule will be adopted by June. The proposed rule defines joint employment thus: "An employer may be found to be a joint-employer of another employer's employees only if it possesses and exercises substantial, direct and immediate control over the essential terms and conditions of employment and has done so in a manner that is not limited and routine."

The court's majority did point out that the NLRB's 2015 standard had "deep roots in the common law," and that the board could include "indirect control" in its test, according to Politico. However, ultimately, the Appeals Court sent the case back to the NLRB to rework its definition of control to be only over working conditions.

Texas Judge Strikes Down ACA (For Now)

On December 14, a Texas federal judge struck down the entire Affordable Care Act (ACA). The case, brought by a group of Republican governors and state attorneys general, centered around the Supreme Court's decision in 2012, which upheld the individual mandate as constitutional based on Congress's taxing power. Because Congress recently "zeroed out" the tax with the passage of the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act, the states argued that the individual mandate can no longer be upheld under Congress's tax power, and without it the whole health law falls apart.

Judge Reed O'Connor of the District Court for the Northern District of Texas in Fort Worth agreed on both points, finding that the individual mandate tax penalty—which will be zero beginning in 2019—is "no longer fairly readable as an exercise of Congress's tax power" and that, because it is "the keystone, the linchpin" of the ACA, the balance of the health law is "inseverable" from it.

Of importance for convenience stores, the ruling will not immediately affect the ACA or impact current coverage (or coverage in 2019). The decision is expected to be appealed to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. The current view among analysts is that—at a minimum—the portion of the opinion invalidating the whole law will not be upheld on review.

President Trump Signs Farm Bill Into Law

President Trump signed into law the Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018, known as the Farm Bill.

NACS advocated for passage of the Farm Bill because of its ban on processing fees on all Electronic Benefits Transfer (EBT) transactions. The bill also reiterates the current ban on interchange fees from these transactions.

"Convenience stores are critical partners in the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program, providing essential access to food for SNAP families who may not live near a larger retailer or who shop during non-traditional hours," said Anna Ready, NACS director of government relations. "NACS commends Congress for passing sensible legislation that will place a ban on all processing fees and emphasizes the ban on interchange fees on SNAP transactions. We are pleased that Congress heeded these concerns and recognized that these fees have a negative impact on SNAP customers."

The Farm Bill reauthorizes the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP). More than 119,000 convenience stores accept SNAP benefits and serve the communities in which they operate.

Failed Deal Could Lead to Auction of Citgo Petroleum

One of Venezuela's creditors has rescinded a settlement agreement with President Nicolás Maduro's government and hired bankers to force a sale of Citgo Petroleum Corp., the country's Houston-based crude refiner, according to the Wall Street Journal.

Crystalex International Corp., a Canadian gold exploration company, wants to auction off Citgo to collect a $1.4 billion debt from Venezuela after negotiations to settle the debt fell through. A forced auction could wrest control of Citgo from the Maduro government and possibly divest Venezuela of a critical revenue source. Citgo, believed to be Venezuela's largest external asset, became a wholly owned subsidiary of the South American country in 1990.

Crystalex hired Moelis & Co., a global independent investment bank, in connection with the potential auction, according to people familiar with the situation, although Citgo officials have not commented on that report.

Most analysts predicted Citgo would fall into the hands of Venezuela's creditors at some point as the country experienced debt defaults, hyperinflation and a collapse in oil production. But despite Venezuela's financial problems, the government wants to keep Citgo's valued Gulf Coast crude refineries.

The government recently entered into a payment plan with Crystalex. Venezuela would pay off a $1.4 billion judgment over gold-mining rights, giving Crystalex $500 million up front and pledging additional quarterly installments through 2021.

Crystalex claims the deal was violated when Citgo's owner, state-owned Petróleos de Venezuela SA, filed U.S. court papers last week arguing that its stake in Citgo is legally protected from seizure under a federal law supporting foreign commercial interests. A U.S. appeals court has frozen proceedings over the potential sale until other legal issues are decided.

Crystalex was once in line to develop Venezuela's huge, untapped Las Cristinas gold mine, believed to be one of the four or five largest gold-mines on earth. When the venture failed, the company was forced into bankruptcy in 2011.

In August, Crystalex convinced a U.S. judge that PdVSA assets in the U.S., including the shares of Citgo's parent company, could be sold to make up for the lost investment. Tenor Capital Management Co., a New York-based lender to Crystalex, has bankrolled efforts to extract money from Venezuela, using Citgo as leverage.

In court filing, Citgo officials said a forced auction could seriously disrupt operations and put thousands of American jobs at risk. Believed to be Venezuela's largest external asset, Citgo's network of refineries, pipelines and terminals make it a flashpoint in the growing geopolitical conflict between Washington and Caracas, in part because U.S. lawmakers worry the assets could be exploited by Russia, a friend to Venezuela's government.

Venezuela has protected Citgo during the country's economic crisis. While defaulting on tens of billions of dollars in debt, PdVSA has continued to pay off the few bondholders that have collateral rights over Citgo, sending them nearly $1 billion in October.

Costco Punished by Wall Street, But Gasoline Numbers Still Magical

Shares of blue-chip retailer Costco continue to get hammered by Wall Street, after reporting some tiny margin compression in first-quarter 2019 earnings released last week. But OPIS' data and comments at the company's conference call last Friday suggest that the magical allure of gasoline is still on the ascent, with Costco fuel sites now showing some of their best returns in years.

Precise margins for the Big Box chain are kept secret, but the company acknowledged that its gasoline profit increased in the 12 weeks ending Nov. 25. If Costco were simply able to buy at an unbranded rack average at its U.S. locations, OPIS estimates they saw about 11cts/gal between their cost and pump price during the period. However, Costco has a perhaps unrivaled ability to buy well under posted or spot benchmarks, and the likelihood is that benefit manifested itself through substantially wider margins.

But since the quarter ended, the company has seen implied profit margins nearly double thanks to descending wholesale costs and stickier retail numbers. OPIS data shows that the typical difference between an average wholesale cost and the Costco retail price has widened out to average over 20cts/gal in the 22 days since the quarter ended.

The company is mum on volumes, but chief financial officer Richard Galanti told investment analysts Friday that its stores have seen "high single-digit gallon comps" in the U.S. population, as compared to flat sales for competitors. "So, we're definitely taking market share and we're enjoying being able to do that while making a little more but not a lot more," he added. In other words, unlike many chain retailers, Costco has seen volume increases.

Many Costco sites move 700,000 gallons per month or more of fuel. Hence, the difference between a month with an 11ct/gal margin and one with, say, a 21ct/gal margin can approach $75,000 per station. Multiply that times more than 400 stores and you have an environment where fuel is giving the company tens of millions of dollars in unanticipated profits.

Costco CFO Galanti was queried by several retail analysts who asked if the overall model for gasoline sales had changed and why prices haven't matched the overall oil drops.

"I think the reason is the traditional retailer -- well all companies including us -- we want to make money and what we have found is that as prices have come down our view is, our motive, if you will, our competitor pricing has gotten bigger."

"What we're saving customers relative to competitor stations nearby whether they are independents, or supermarkets or 'nationals', we're saving more today than we've ever saved per gallon and we're making more than we've ever made. Partly because everybody else is making more, we're able to make a little more."

Galanti added that "it does seem there is not a heck of a lot of traction on gas prices going up."

However, Costco executives have always emphasized that fuel sales aren't just about making money; the lure of gas that is 20cts/gal cheaper than typical service stations has a dramatic impact on visits to the warehouses and trips inside to purchase various goods. To that end, Costco disclosed on Friday that shopping frequency at its U.S. locations was up 5.2%, and membership renewals rose from an already impressive 90.4% to 90.5%. The total number of cardholders for the company advanced to 95.4 million.

More warehouses are coming in fiscal 2019, with the company hinting that of 23 new sites, about three-quarters of the locations, will be in the U.S. Specifics haven't been released but reports indicate that warehouses will pop up in states that include New Jersey, Oklahoma, Texas, Illinois, Florida, and Minnesota, with prospects for another 20 or so sites in New York, Connecticut, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Missouri, Idaho, Rhode Island and California in the next few years.

U.S. Surgeon General Issues E-Cigarette Advisory Aimed at Protecting Youth From Nicotine Addiction

As the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) grapples with underage use of electronic cigarettes, the U.S. Surgeon General issued an advisory on the subject.

In the advisory on Dec. 18, Surgeon General Jerome Adams outlined proposed calls to action for parents, teachers, health professionals, and community and elected officials.

"The recent surge in e-cigarette use among youth, which has been fueled by new types of e-cigarettes that have recently entered the market, is a cause for great concern. We must take action now to protect the health of our nation's young people," Adams said.

Similar to FDA's comments on e-cigarettes and vapor products, Adams also called out Juul. The San Francisco-based vapor company has soared in popularity among underage users.

"We must take aggressive steps to protect our children from these highly potent products that risk exposing a new generation of young people to nicotine. The bad news is that e-cigarette use has become an epidemic among our nation's young people," he said. "However, the good news is that we know what works to effectively protect our kids from all forms of tobacco product use, including e-cigarettes. We must now apply these strategies to e-cigarettes, including USB flash drive-shaped products such as Juul."

"To achieve success, we must work together, aligning and coordinating efforts across both old and new partners at the national, state and local levels. Everyone can play an important role in protecting our nation's young people from the risks of e-cigarettes," Adams said.

Last month, Juul Labs unveiled steps to combat underage use of its products, as Convenience Store News previously reported. For example, on Nov. 13, it stopped taking retail orders for its flavored Juul pods, effectively removing them from more than 90,000 retail locations.

Going forward, Cucumber, Mango, Creme and Fruit pods will only be available online. Its tobacco and menthol-based products consist of Virginia Tobacco, Classic Tobacco, Mint and Menthol were not affected by the decision.

Juul's move came just days before FDA Commissioner Scott Gottlieb issued several directives the agency's Center for Tobacco Products, including revisiting its policy regarding menthol cigarettes and flavored cigars and restricting the sale of flavored vapor products to age-restricted, in-person locations and, if sold online, under heightened practices for age verification. This directive includes all flavors other than tobacco, mint and menthol.

This restriction does not apply to do-it yourselfers.

Selling Your Inspection License

If you are thinking of retiring or selling your business and have a New York State DMV Inspection license, your license may be valuable depending on the county where your shop is located.

If you have questions on the sale and/or transfer of an inspection license call the association office at 518-452-4367.

Attention Inspection Stations

The Association has received a flurry of requests for legal representation for violations of the DMV commissioner regulations known as "clean scanning." that is when a vehicle other than the one to be inspected is substitute for the OBD-II part of the test. We have no defense for these violations. DMV has the ability to trace the OBD-II inspection to the vehicle used for the inspection.

If you cannot pass a vehicle for any reason, get help. That help could come from DMV. This violation almost always results in revocation.
